

It's a sunny day in the park outside, and Calimero and friends are there doing their favorite things. As is usual for this time of day, Valeriano's skating at the ramp with Calimero.

"Ok Calimero. I start skating, then you skate after me." Valeriano said.

"Alright." said Calimero, and starts skating just after Valeriano has begun.

Over to an open spot nearby, Wario and VARIO are test driving their Wario-Bikes to see if they're functioning properly. VARIO's having a bit of trouble getting his bike to start though.

"Ah come on stupid bike! Why won't you start??" VARIO said and starts banging on his bike after having tried every possible solution. Seeing his brother having problems, Wario stops his bike and walks over to VARIO to see what the issue is.

"Hey VARIO, you seem to be struggling with your bike. What's the problem?" Wario asked him.

"I can't get my bike going! No matter what I try to do, it just won't start." VARIO said.

"Well, for a start... have you got the keys to your bike?" Wario asked.

"Yes, but even if I put the keys in and try to start the bike, it still won't turn itself on." VARIO said. Just as Wario is trying to think of another cause he quickly spots the problem.

"Er... not sure if you're aware of this, but the switch on the engine of your bike is turned off. Guess that's why it won't start." Wario told him.

"Hm, strange... I wonder why that could be, because as far as I know I haven't even touched it, let alone even knowing of its existence on the engine." VARIO said and flips the switch back on again.

"Alright. With the problem now fixed, are you ready to start test driving with me?" Wario asked him.

"I'm ready for sure!" VARIO said and gets up on his bike. They then start driving around the area they're test driving on.

Meanwhile, Priscilla is standing by the skateboarding ramp along with Roshita, cheering on Calimero and Valeriano's stunts, respectively. As they keep cheering on their boyfriends the sounds coming from Wario and VARIO's bikes catches Priscilla's attention.

"Hunh... what's that I'm hearing in the background?" Priscilla said and turns around to see Wario and VARIO driving around on their bikes. After looking at them for a while she becomes very excited seeing them just driving around the way they do.

"Woow... that just looks soo fun!! ... wonder if I should have a go at trying to drive a motor-bike myself..." Priscilla said to herself. "Naw. It might be nothing for me to even try... It may not even be as fun and exciting as I think it would be." she then refused, but the thought still linger inside her mind. In the end Priscilla just stops caring about her common-sense self and wants to really have a go at driving a bike.

Just then a crash is heard offscreen. The screen pans over to show that VARIO's been crashing his bike into a tree. Wario stops his bike just besides where VARIO crashed and starts laughing at his accident.

"Hey, it's not funny at all!" VARIO told him off, having just gotten back up on his feet.

"Heh heh... alright, sorry. Even so, why didn't you see the tree coming in front of you?" asked Warrio.

"Um... to tell the truth, a butterfly flew by and I sorta got distracted by it. Because of that I just didn't have time to react or even see what was coming ahead of me." VARIO explained.

"Oh, ok. That explanation of yours sounds reasonable enough to me." Warrio said. Just then they see Priscilla running towards the two.

"Hi Warrio, hi VARIO!" Priscilla shouted to them.

"Hey Priscilla. What brings you here?" Warrio asked.

"Well, I just noticed you guys driving around on your bikes, and you guys seem fairly talented at it!" Priscilla said.

"Aw, it's nothing. It's just within my nature to be able to drive a Wario-Bike as good as I do. Same goes for VARIO over here." Warrio said and points to VARIO.

"Well. I'm also pretty much used to drive around on a bike. But us being able to drive on such vehicles didn't just come overnight." VARIO said.

"Yeah. Back in our younger days we barely even knew how to drive one. But we persisted, and over time we learned how to drive on bikes... anyway, was there anything else you wanted to say?" Warrio asked.

"Um... I just wanted to ask... can I have a go at driving on your bike maybe?" Priscilla asked him.

"Sorry, but you're just too young to drive a motor-bike, especially a Wario-Bike." Warrio told her.

"Aaw..." Priscilla said in disappointment. She still wants to have a go though.

"VARIO. Could you lend your bike to me maybe?" Priscilla asked him.

"Um..." VARIO pondered.

"Pleasee." Priscilla began begging him.

"Well, I'm not too sure there... NOT because I think you're too young or anything. It's just..." VARIO was about to finish his sentence, but already Priscilla's starting to feel like they think she's too young.

"Hmpf, fine. If neither of you guys are willing to let me drive your bikes, then I'll go ask Maya. I'm sure she'll let me borrow her bike!" Priscilla said and starts running off.

"But I haven't even finished yet! ... I was just concerned for her safety, considering she's never driven a motor-bike before." VARIO said.

Just a bit away from Warrio and VARIO, Maya the Bee is standing at her bike doing some repairs to it following an accident that happened the previous day.

"Phew... my bike sure has seen some major damages here and there. Will probably take a bit of time for me to fix it." Maya said while she's repairing her bike. Just then she sees Priscilla coming her way.

"Maya!!" Priscilla shouted out to her as she's running towards her.

"Ah, Priscilla! What brings you to me?" Maya asked her.

"Well, I just saw you fiddling with your bike, and..." Priscilla said.

"Yes. I'm doing some repairs to it right now. Last day I was just parking my bike outside the grocery store, only to find it laying on the ground a distance away from the store along with a car. It turned out the owner of the car had the accelerating pedal break, and having no way of stopping his car crashed right into my bike and into the wall outside of the store building." Maya said.

"Aw no, that's quite bad to hear!" Priscilla said.

"It is. But the car owner apologized to me and paid me for the damages to my bike, which I more than appreciated." Maya said. "By the way, was there something you wanted to tell me?"

"Oh yeah... may I have a go driving your bike after you've repaired it?" Priscilla asked her.

"Sorry to say this, but you're far too young to drive one." Maya told her. Having heard this for the third time in a row, Priscilla's starting to feel downcast.

"Ooh... well, guess I'll just head back to the skateboarding ramp then." Priscilla said, and sadly walks her way back to the ramp. Maya notices Priscilla's feeling left out though, and reconsiders.

"Priscilla." Maya said to her.

"Hunh?" Priscilla said and turns around to face Maya.

"You know. Maybe I should let you have a go after all!" Maya told her.

"Really??" Priscilla said in surprise.

"Yeah. I noticed that you started feeling down after I told you that you were too young to drive on a bike, and... not wanting you to feel sad, I thought that I'd lend you my bike to drive around on." Maya said.

"Oh, thank you so much!! I promise to be driving it responsibly!" Priscilla said and cheers up.

"Ok. How about I give you some driving lessons?" Maya said.

"That would be great!" Priscilla said with enthusiasm.

"Alright then. Before we begin though I have to fix my bike first. Would you like to help me with it maybe?" Maya asked.

"Sure. I'll help you fix it up!" Priscilla said and starts assisting Maya with repairing her bike.

After getting her bike fixed with Priscilla's help, Priscilla is finally allowed to borrow Maya's bike. She gets herself up on the bike, but ends up sitting on it for around a minute or so.

"Maya? How do one get this thing going?" Priscilla asked Maya.

"Well. To make it start, just turn the key to the right!" Maya told her and inserts the key to the bike. Priscilla does as told and turns the key to the right, making the engine start.

"Good going Priscilla! Now, I know you're a fast learner, so I'll only instruct you when required, ok?" Maya said.

"That's fine with me." Priscilla said. She then wonders why the bike still isn't moving.

"Turn the grips of the steering handle towards you." Maya instructed her.

"Is it the one I'm now holding onto?" Priscilla asked.

"Yes." Maya said.

Priscilla turns the grips of the handle towards her, but ends up driving at a fast speed which puts her in a bit of panic. She quickly turns the grips in the opposite direction which makes the bike stop.

"Phew..." Priscilla said, now being in a state of shock. Maya then finally catches up to her.

"Oh dear, you're in a bit of chock right now, are you?" asked Maya.

"Y-y-yes!!!" Priscilla stammered while her body is shaking.

"It's ok, Priscilla, it's ok. Nothing happened to you. You're still safe." Maya tries to calm her nerves. After calming her down Maya then tells Priscilla that it's important to remember that the steering handle also serves as a way to control the speed of the bike.

"Oh, I understand now. Thanks for telling me that!" Priscilla said.

"Remember to only turn the grips so much to how fast you want the bike to go." Maya told her.

"Alright, I get it." Priscilla said. "Is there any way to find out how fast I'm going?" Priscilla asked.

"See the speed meter on the display there?" Maya said.

"Yes?" Priscilla asked.

"That will let you know how fast the bike is going. By now it's all the way to the left. As you accelerate it goes more to the right. The further to the right it is, the faster the bike goes." Maya said.

"Oh, alright." Priscilla said.

"As my last advice to you; ALWAYS keep an eye on the speed meter to make sure you're not driving too fast." Maya advised her.

"I understand. Now, is it time for my driving lessons now?" Priscilla asked.

"Yes, it is. We'll be starting right now." Maya said and begins the lessons to teach Priscilla how to drive the bike properly.

"To start it off, let's see if you can drive the bike all the way to the other side of the park. Are you ready?" Maya said.

"I'm more than ready." Priscilla said.

"Alright. Start your bike now and get to the other side of the park!" Maya said.

Priscilla starts the bike and starts to accelerate. At first everything seems to be going just well for her.

"Hey, it works. My first time driving a motor-bike and yet things seems to be going great so far!" Priscilla said while feeling proud of herself. However, she fails to stop the bike when reaching the other side, and almost ends up driving into Piero and Susie.

"AAH!!" said Priscilla and steers her bike away, crashing into the fountain in the center of the park.

"Hey, watch it Priscilla! You could've ended up hurting us!" Piero said.

"Priscilla, are you ok?" Maya said after catching up to her.

"I'm fine. But I forgot to stop the bike at the right moment." Priscilla admitted.

"Let's try it one more time, shall we?" Maya asked her.

"Alright." said Priscilla.

On her second try Priscilla starts the bike again and drives towards the other side of the park. Just then she sees a kitten standing in front of her.

"Ah no!!" Priscilla shouted in panic and frantically tries to steer the bike away from the kitten to avoid harming it, but in doing so she ends up spinning out of control.

"Aaaah!!" Priscilla screamed as the bike keeps spinning around. The bike eventually stops spinning, and now stands still right on the spot. Priscilla's now not only feeling dizzy, but also a bit traumatized over what just happened to her.

"Priscilla!! What happened??" Maya said after catching up to her.

"I... I-I saw a little kitty in front of me and... and after trying to steer myself away from it the bike began spinning around like crazy!!" Priscilla said.

"It's alright Priscilla! At least the kitten came to no harm, and so didn't you as well." Maya comforted her.

"I-I... I'm still feeling a bit scared after this event though! ..." Priscilla said.

"I know. However, maybe you should've thought about putting on the brakes instead of just trying to steer away like that." Maya told her.

"S-Sorry about it..." Priscilla said.

"Look, it's all fine. I'm aware that this is probably your first time driving a motor-bike. Successfully mastering it is going to take a bit of time and patience." Maya told her.

"I've actually driven a racer kart once early on. That was a rather long time ago though, and trying to drive a motor-bike sure isn't the same thing as riding a bicycle, even if both things run on two wheels. I thought it was going to be an easy task... easier said than done I suppose." Priscilla said.

"I understand Priscilla. Do you wanna try driving to the other end a third time?" Maya asked her.

"Hm... no. I feel like I'm pretty much done with this task now." Priscilla said.

"Alright. Let's just proceed to the 2nd lesson then, shall we?" Maya asked her. Priscilla agrees to proceed with lesson two of her bike-driving practice.

For the second lesson, Priscilla has to learn how to do a spin with the bike.

"Ok, for your 2nd lesson you have to try do a spin while you're sitting on the bike. I prefer spinning my bike to the right, but you may spin it in whichever direction you want. Got it?" Maya said.

"Yep, got it!" Priscilla said.

Priscilla gives it a try and tries doing a spin in the area of the park she's on, but ends up falling off the bike as it spins.

"Aah!!" said Priscilla as she's sent off flying, and lands in the water fountain in the park. Maya rushes off to retrieve her bike before it goes off on its own. Fortunately for her it crashes into a tree.

"Phew. At least it won't be going any further than this... now, time to check in on Priscilla!" Maya said and runs to the water fountain where Priscilla's laying down in the water.

"Are you ok Priscilla?" Maya asked her out of concern.

"I'm fine Maya... apart from having hurt my right arm a bit." Priscilla said and rolls up the right arm on her blouse.

"Well, it appears to be just a couple scratches, so I think our driving lessons can still continue." Maya said and runs off to her apartment to get some plaster.

After having some plaster put over the scars on her right arm, Priscilla has a helmet put on her head by Maya as a safety measure to make sure she doesn't hurt her head if any accidents happen.

Priscilla tries to spin her bike on the spot a second time, only this time she ends up sliding around various parts of the park, driving onto lots of benches, making them fly up and land on their spots upside-down.

"Ooh, I really need to try stopping the bike now!!" Priscilla said after spinning around for a while and eventually manages to stop the bike.

"How well do you think did I Maya??" Priscilla asked her.

"Not very good. Going by all the benches around here now being upside-down, you didn't do very well on the 2nd lesson." Maya told her.

"Aaw... I was at least hoping for a small plus there... anyway, I'm feeling so ill now that I just need to lay down..." Priscilla said and lays down on the ground for a while until she recovers from her illness.

"Should I get you a vomit bag maybe?" Maya asked.

"No thanks, that's not needed... ulp... I better not talk any more now, or I'll more than likely throw up. Priscilla said and stops to talk any more."

"Oh dear... I have a feeling that trying to teach Priscilla how to drive a bike isn't going to be the easiest thing in the world." Maya said to herself. "And you're sure you don't want me to go get a vomit bag for you?" she asked Priscilla.

"No thank you... I think I can manage it..." Priscilla said and turns silent, barely letting out a word besides some groaning.

After recovering from her illness, Priscilla's ready to tackle the spinning lesson a third time.

"Ok. This time I'm GOING to do it!" Priscilla said and starts spinning with the bike again. However, once she stops the bike after spinning it successfully she's sent flying yet another time.

"Oh no, not again!!" Priscilla said as she's about to fly right into the window of the Wario bros' apartment.

At the same time, inside the Wario bros' living room Wario-Ware-Man is just starting to teach Warrio's parrot how to behave properly.

"Ok, dear parrot. Do as I say now; Leave my bowl of newly fried garlic alone!" Wario-Ware-Man told the parrot.

"Squawk, squawk. I'll eat the garlic right now!!" The parrot said and is about to try steal from Wario-Ware-Man's garlic bowl.

"Oh no, you don't!! If we're gonna let you out of the cage every once in a while, then you better have to learn some form of discipline!" Wario-Ware-Man told the parrot. Just then Priscilla's crashing through the window, making the parrot squawk and fly back into its cage in panic.

"My garlic!! I sure got a bit startled there for a moment!" Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Sorry Wario-Ware-Man..." Priscilla excused herself.

"So... you're starting to break into other peoples' homes by now?" Wario-Ware-Man joked.

"No, I'm having bike-driving lessons with Maya. It ain't going very well so far though..." Priscilla said.

"Um... seriously, I suggest that you better think it over a bit. You might as well hurt yourself if you're not being careful!" Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Aw come on Wario-Ware-Man. I'm not too young to drive a bike! I really wanna learn how to do it, even it so is going to take me years to accomplish!!" Priscilla told him off.

"Alright, calm down there! Sorry for judging you so quickly." Wario-Ware-Man apologized.

"Apology accepted from my side." Priscilla said.

"If you wanna have fun trying to ride a motor-bike, then by all means go ahead! I won't be stopping you. Just remember to try being more careful, ok?" Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Alright. I'll try being more careful from now on." Priscilla said and heads out of the Wario bros' apartment, closing the door on her way out.

"So, Priscilla's been having an obsession with trying to drive a bike as of late? ... Personally I think she's still too young to drive one, but that's her own call I guess... right, gotta check my garlic bowl now." Wario-Ware-Man said and heads back into the living room only to find his garlic bowl empty. In the bird cage the parrot is now sitting on the peg, looking slightly rounder than he first remembered.

"Let me guess... you've been eating my garlic while I had my back turned, didn't you?" he asked him.

"Burp... I don't know what fatso are talking about." said the parrot as it starts producing yet another belch.

"I knew it was him all the time... anyway, I'm not in the mood to scold him for doing that. Guess I'll just prepare another bowl with fried garlic then." Wario-Ware-Man said and goes into the kitchen to make some more fried garlic.

Meanwhile, in the park outside, Calimero and Valeriano have long since finished skating on the ramp and are now sitting on the benches with their friends discussing Priscilla's new interest in bike driving.

"It's strange to me that she's now trying to learn to drive motor-bikes." Calimero said.

"Yeah. She usually never shows any interest in that kind of stuff, but why now??" Valeriano asked himself.

"Maybe she saw us driving around on our Wario-Bikes and suddenly wanted to try it out. That's what I'm figuring anyway." Warriio said.

"Ha-ha, like we didn't just see it for ourselves earlier??" VARIO asked him.

"Well... yes, we did. But... ah whatever, never mind me." Warriio said.

"Well, at least we all have our interests here in life." Susie said, who is being photographed by Piero while she's sitting on her own bench.

"Hasn't that girl got any better ways to pass her own time??" Warriio asked himself.

"Don't ask us. She sometimes does that just because she knows she can do it." Roshita said.

They all keep discussing Priscilla's new biking obsession. Meanwhile, Maya the Bee is standing just besides where the guys are sitting keeping an eye on Priscilla sitting on a bench all by herself.

"Sigh... even if I know she just wants to learn how to drive it, I just can't help but feel that in one way or another she's going to hurt herself in the end. I better hope she doesn't though..." Maya said to herself. Just then she hears something that catches her attention.

"Huh? What's that tune I'm hearing?" Maya said and goes to investigate. Not far away is a jam band that has just started playing in the park.

"Oh my, that tune sure is a hit with me!" Maya said in complete amazement and starts digging to the music. The applause from Maya catches the attention of the main player of the band. She stops playing her saxophone to bow to Maya's applause.

"Thank you madame, thank you!" The girl said. It doesn't take long for Maya to recognize the girl though.

"Hang on, that long red dress of yours... haven't I seen it before? Could you possibly be Emma??" Maya asked her. The red dressed girl then reveals her face by removing her shades.

"Yes, I'm Emma! How did you even recognize it was me?" she asked Maya.

"Well, I saw it on your dress. You look fairly similar to one of the lead character from that Jasper movie!" Maya told her.

"That girl in a red dress from the movie was in fact me. I've also featured in an 52-episode childrens series earlier back in 2001." Emma said.

"What are you doing here at a place like this?" Maya asked.

"Well, after my contract with Millimages ended, I decided to move on with my life and become the leader of a jam band, which is basically this one." Emma said.

"Are you enjoying your new career so far?" Maya asked her.

"You bet I'am! Never in my life have I felt so welcome into a band before. I do still miss my best friend Jasper..." Emma said and sheds a few tears.

"I know how it feels. Leaving someone that's been close to you for years isn't easy." Maya told her.

"It sure isn't. Before leaving though I promised to always send letters to him in a bottle." Emma said.

"Do you hear anything back from him?" Maya asked.

"Of course! He regularly sends letters to me, telling me about his adventures and how much he misses me." Emma said. Peeking out from the five member group, Elmyra Duff from the Tiny Toons series also shows herself.

"Hey there young bee girl head! Are you enjoying our music so far?" Elmyra asked her.

"Elmyra Duff?? Are you a member of the band too?!!" Maya asked her.

"Yes I'am! I've never been happier before for sure!" Elmyra said enthusiastically.

"Well, let's just hope I'm not gonna be hugged or squeezed to death now..." Maya said to herself.

"It's fine Maya. She's not gonna do that anymore." Emma assured her.

"Yeah, she's right. I've changed for the better now. Look, I've even ditched my old skull bow!" Elmyra said and lifts her hat to show her new red bow.

"Oh, I see. That's one change at least!" Maya said.

"Anyway. Elmyra seems to like her new life better here than in the Tiny Toons universe. At least that's what she told me." Emma said.

"I sure do! I'm just so tired of being the main punching bag of their gags, and not to mention my disastrous times at the Pinky and The Brain show..." Elmyra said.

"Pinky and The Brain?" Maya asked.

"Yes. It wasn't I who decided to become one of the main characters in the Pinky and The Brain and Elmyra Duff spinoff. It was more of an decision made by the network who broadcasted the show. I was simply being contracted to star in it. Even if I didn't like it, I still had to be in my usual character. And even though many didn't take it too kindly, I secretly hated my role in that show!" Elmyra said.

"So you didn't like it at all?" Maya asked.

"No! And that was only the start of it all." Elmyra said.

"That show aside... what exactly led you to move to this town anyway?" Maya asked her.

"Well... it all started back in the old days of Tiny Toons; you see, one day I was chasing Buster Bunny across the schoolyard in Acme Acres, but while this was going on I suddenly came to a stop and started thinking over why I always kept chasing animals or creatures all the time. After that moment I increasingly grew tired of chasing the very same guys all the time, let alone even trying to chase anything at all. In the end I stopped finding it fun, and decided to start changing my way of being." Elmyra said.

"How did Buster and gang take it?" Maya asked.

"At first they didn't believe that I was telling them that I'd be leaving Acme Acres for good, and assumed I was playing a trick on them. However, I had it all fully thought out and through, and I was set to be leaving it all behind me when the time finally came. One day, I started leaving my house by dawn, hours before school time, and began walking along the road the opposite direction to Acme Acres." Elmyra said.

"Alright. So how did Buster and his friends react when you didn't show up that day?" Maya asked.

"From what I heard, they didn't seem to mind it at first, and assumed I was being late or doing something else. As the weeks went by though, it eventually became clear to them that I've since left the Tiny Toons world to seek other things to pursue." Elmyra said.

"Ok. How long did it take you to arrive here?" Maya asked.

"About 5 months. I essentially rowed my way to this town by boat, all on my own. After having made my way to this town I decided to look for a job straight away." Elmyra said.

"Was becoming a band member the first thing you decided upon?" Maya asked her.

"Well, it was the very thing I first landed on after one of the members asked me if I could play an instrument. I demonstrated my hidden talent to them by playing a piece from a song with just a bass guitar. They immediately saw potential in me and offered me to join their jam band. I accepted right on the spot, and now I'm here, playing with my jam buddies!" Elmyra said.

"It was I who asked her to join our band by the way." Emma pointed out.

"Yep. I've also found myself a new friend with Emma here. She's just soo sweet for being the leader of this band, and also very nice of herself!" Elmyra said.

"What a story... anyhow, giving up an old habit for something else is usually not a very easy thing for many to do." Maya said.

"Well, I can only say that the moment it hit me is when I decided it was time to move on." Elmyra said.

"At least I'm more than happy for her sake. If it hadn't been for that occurrence of hers, then she and I wouldn't have had even met." Emma said.

"So. Do you miss your old times at Acme Acres?" Maya asked.

"Barely anymore, really. In fact, I don't think I'd ever wanna return to chasing things again." Elmyra said.

"Alright, I understand." Maya said.

Just then the Calimero group arrives along with Warriio and VARIO, wondering what all the fuss is about.

"What's going on here?" Warriio asked.

"Yeah. What is this all about?" Piero asked.

"Emma from the Jasper the Penguin series are now part of a jam band, and along with the other members plays their music in the park from time to time." Maya told them.

"Actually, we mostly frequent resturants because they tend to be filled with more people. But we make exceptions sometimes, especially if the place attracts a lot of people." Emma said.

"Is playing music in a band the only thing you do?" Calimero asked.

"Actually..." Emma said while lowering her voice. "At daytime I often tour around the town with this band here. But at night I'm working as a private detective. This is something that's been known only to myself. I've heard that you and your friends are solving mysteries and investigaint sites as well." Emma said.

"Yes, we do. We've been doing it for a very long time in fact. Where can we find your headquarters, if you have any that is?" Calimero said.

"I'm afraid I can't tell you that here, because we're about to start playing. I also don't wanna reveal the location of my HQs to anyone else." Emma said.

"Alright. Do call us if you'd ever need our assistance." Maya said.

"I will. See you guys later." Emma said.

"Ok. See you!" Maya said as they're walking back to their benches.

Later, Priscilla has just gotten herself back up on Maya's bike again, determined to really learn how to drive it.

"Alright. This time I'm really GOING to do it! Nothing should be stopping me now!" Priscilla said and starts driving with the bike. At first she seems to be able to keep the bike under her control.

"Wohoo, I'm doing it! Finally I'm getting somewhere with this practice!!" Priscilla said in excitement. Just then she sees a Dumb-Crow crossing the street in front of her.

"Uh-oh. Time to put on the brakes now!" Priscilla said and stops her bike, but ends up going in reverse and crashes into a wall.

"Huh? What was that?!" Maya heard the racket behind her and rushes over to see what happened. She sees Priscilla lying on the street besides the bike, having hurt herself once again.

"I'm starting to get more and more concerned for you, Priscilla! Maybe we better drop the practice altogether before you get yourself injured even more." Maya told her, worried for her safety.

"No way! I'm not gonna give it all up yet!" Priscilla said and gets herself up on the bike again.

"But Maya, the bike hasn't been fixed yet!" Maya warned her, but it's too late. After Priscilla tries to drive the bike again she ends up doing a backwards vault with the bike and lands on the ground, with the bike crashing down a distance away from her.

"Oow..." Priscilla groaned in pain. Despite this she gets up on the bike again and makes another attempt at driving it, but crashes into one of the trees in the park.

"Aow, aow, aaow!! ..." Priscilla said again, now feeling even more pain in her left arm. After seeing this Maya decides it's time for her to intervene.

"Priscilla. Please do as I tell you! Take a break from trying to drive the bike any more now before you end up in some terrible accident!" Maya told her.

"Yeah. Seriously Priscilla, you better stop with it now. I don't want you to end up hurt so badly that we'd have to rush you to the hospital!" Calimero told her as well.

"But I... Ah, ok then. Guess I'll take a break then." Priscilla eventually agreed with them. After having her left arm bandaged they then sit down with her in the town's cafeteria for some ice cream.

"Sure has been a great day today, hasn't it?" Valeriano said.

"Yeah. And who would've thought of seeing Emma from the Jasper series around here!" Calimero said.

"Sigh... don't think I'll ever be able to drive a motor-bike no matter how hard I try." Priscilla sighed.

"Priscilla. Just try and forget about the bike practice for now, ok?" Maya said.

"Yeah. Just enjoy your ice cream like the rest of us!" Susie said.

"I'm trying, but the desire to learn how to drive that bike are still spinning in my mind." Priscilla said.

"I suggest you just put it aside for now. Your left arm is still hurt, and none of us would want you to try and drive a bike with a broken arm. We can try again sometime later if you want." Maya said.

"I suppose you guys are right. I'll just try enjoying my ice cream now." Priscilla said and starts tugging in on her ice cream.

As evening looms over the town, the Wario bros and Maya are now sitting in their apartment doing their things, while Calimero and friends are sitting in their own apartment just opposite. Priscilla's still thinking about the bike lessons she were taking earlier in the day.

"Sigh... I know I'm too young to drive a bike, but part of me still wants to do it! ... I know what I need to do; I'm gonna try do it until I succeed!" Priscilla said to herself with confidence.

"Priscilla! Just sit down and take it easy now." Roshita told her. "Your left arm is still injured, and you better take this into consideration before you just go ahead with this goal of yours."

"Exactly. I however don't really want you to try drive a motor-bike of any kind again. What if you ended up in some really fatal accident should things go wrong for you??" Calimero said. Priscilla's now feeling more discouraged than ever before.

"Ooh!! I'm soo gonna prove those guys wrong! I'm just as capable of driving a bike as the Wario bros are!" Priscilla thought to herself in her mind.

"Please, Priscilla. I'm just worried about your own safety!" Calimero told her.

"Ah, alright. I promise not to think about that again..." Priscilla told them.

"Promise it now?" Roshita asked her.

"I promise I won't." Priscilla said.

"Alright then. Do you want some juice? I'm just off to the kitchen to go and get the jug!" Roshita asked.

"Yes please." Priscilla said.

Later at night, the Green Team have now since gone to bed. Priscilla on the other hand is lying awake in her bed, reading on a book.

"Sigh... no matter how hard I try not to think about the bike lessons I've had earlier, I still feel the urge to go out and practice." Priscilla said to herself while still reading her book. She eventually can't let go of it any longer. Wanting to have another go at it again, Priscilla decides to sneak out of the apartment to try practicing her bike driving skills.

"I hope nobody's awake now..." Priscilla whispered to herself and looks around to see if things are clear. Fortunately for her it seems to be the case, so she goes out of the apartment, making sure not to wake anybody up on her way out.

Down in the Wario bros' garage, Priscilla's looking around for Maya's bike. After some searching she spots it standing in some corner, still broken.

"Hm, not my most lucky moment there... ha, I'm gonna try fix it despite this." Priscilla said and decides to repair the bike. After getting it fixed and having pushed it out of the garage she's more than ready to get herself onto the bike again.

"There. As good as new. Too bad my left arm still hurts though..." Priscilla said. Despite the fact that her left arm is still hurting, she doesn't let it bother her.

After getting herself up on the bike Priscilla turns the bike on and starts driving. For a start she decides to drive at the lowest speed possible. So far things seems to be going quite well for her.

"It works pretty well!! Maybe I'm ready to start speeding up a little now." Priscilla said and starts accelerating a bit more.

"I'm going at medium speed now and I still haven't fallen off the bike yet! Suppose I can increase the speed some more." Priscilla said and starts driving faster. However, as she's about to turn left she suddenly feels a bit stressed inside.

"Uh-oh! M-maybe I'll just stop the bike now!" Priscilla said and stops the bike for a moment.

"Phew... I don't think I'm too comfortable with driving faster yet." Priscilla said and stays on the spot for a while. After waiting for a minute or so she starts driving again, this time at a slower speed as she's about to turn to the left.

"Alright. The speed I'm currently driving at now I think is good enough. I better take things slowly, and only start driving faster whenever I feel I'm ready." Priscilla said and keeps driving around for a while with the bike. She's finding the experience quite enjoyable so far.

"My, this is even more fun than I thought it would be! And I haven't even crashed into anything yet!" Priscilla said. After some time driving on the roads she decides to start driving a little bit faster, but accidentally turns the grips of the steering handle too much, making the bike go too fast for her.

"Oh no! Not a very comfortable speed for me!!" Priscilla said and tries to turn the handles the opposite direction, but the grips for adjusting the speed starts to malfunction.

"What... Oh NO! I can no longer adjust the speed!!" Priscilla said and started to shriek out of fear and panic as she keeps speeding across on the road.

Outside of some store, a thief has just robbed some silver wares and is about to start driving off with her loot. Her name is Suzana. She's a chick about the same size as Priscilla, and even has the same ribbon band on her head. The color of her band though differs from Priscilla; it is purple instead of pink.

"Ha ha ha. Now that was quite an easy steal! I was smart enough to spot the video cameras and security measures and get them disabled. Now, time for me to drive outta the town." Suzana said and starts riding her bike.

As Suzana is making her way out of the town Priscilla then drives past her. Being distracted by Priscilla's sudden appearance she doesn't see where she's driving.

"Aaah!" said Suzana as she drives into some paint buckets, causing some paint to fly off and cover Priscilla's ribbon band in purple. Not minding it for now, Priscilla continues to drive around the town at fast speed.

Meanwhile, the Dumb-Crow police are sitting in their car looking out for the thief that's been robbing the stores across the town as of recently.

"Alright. We've been on lookout for the thief for hours now, and yet I can't see her anywhere. Have you seen her by now?" The police officer said.

"Afraid not." the police assistant said. "If I'm going to be a let down to you, I suspect we may not even catch this thief tonight."

"Agh, that's it then. Maybe the thief's already left the town by now..." The police officer said in disappointment. Just then though, they see Priscilla zooming by their car.

"Did... did you just see what I saw??" the police assistant asked.

"I did. Going by that ribbon band of hers, that MUST be the thief we're trying to catch! Remember that her band is purple, and she's also known for frequently breaking traffic laws to great extent!" The police officer said. They start driving after Priscilla, mistaking her for Suzana.

"Huh? The police's going after me!? Maybe it's because I'm driving too fast?? I better try get myself rid of them!!" Priscilla panicked and tries shaking them off to little avail. Not that she's got any choice, because she can't even stop her bike anyway.

They keep chasing Priscilla across the town, not stopping until they catch her. At the same time Suzana seems to have gotten lost as to which way to go.

"Hm. Looks like I'm a bit lost. Which way out of the town is it again??" Suzana said and keeps driving around the streets. Meanwhile, the police has just stopped their car in front of the traffic lights. For some reason they very easily get distracted by things they see, and often forget to go after their suspects.

"You see that bird on the traffic light above?" The police officer said.

"Yeah?" the police assistant said.

"I think that's what they call a "seagull"..." the police officer said.

"But... are you sure it's even a seagull? It looks more like a Woodster to me." the police assistant said. Just then the creature jumps down from the traffic lights, shown to actually be a Woodster and walks off.

"Hm. Now that's an very unusual sight these days! Those Woodsters sure know how to trick people into thinking they're something else." the police officer said.

Just then Suzana is about to turn left, only to see the police standing in front of her.

"Darn it!!" Suzana said and starts turning back again.

"Hey, that's the thief we were chasing earlier! We better get her this time!!" the police officer said and starts chasing after Suzana. She's then out of sight again, and yet again the police keep getting distracted by things.

"Hm. Looks to be some kind of pub over there... Shall we go and have a drink?" the police assistant asked.

"Naw. I want ot be sober at a night like this. Besides, we're on duty now..." the police officer said.

Priscilla then appears again, and is about to drive past the police without realizing it.

"Uh-oh!!" Priscilla said and starts turning in the opposite direction, with the police giving chase after her.

After losing track of Priscilla yet again, they then see the real thief driving past them. They start chasing her, and this keeps going on and on for a fair bit of time until the police just stops their car and rests for a while.

"Phew... sure is a bit tiring to keep chasing after that thief. At one point she is at one spot, but suddenly she pops up somewhere else." the police assistant said.

"Yeah. One can wonder if she's got some sort of jet rocket on that bike!" the police officer said.

"Could always be possible..." the police assistant said.

Meanwhile, Priscilla's still driving on the roads in the town. It looks like she's finally shaken off the cops.

"Huh? Looks like I've finally shaken them off now." Priscilla said and sighs in relief. Just then Suzana appears just besides her.

"Hey, w-who are you??" Priscilla asked her.

"And who are YOU?" Suzana asked back.

"Wait a sec. You're looking pretty much like me!" Priscilla pointed out.

"And YOU look exactly like me! Only difference is you ain't wearing a thief mask like I do." Suzana said.

"Well, suppose that's enough for the cops to tell us apart!" Priscilla said.

"Don't feel so sure about it! Your ribbon band also looks to be purple." Suzana pointed out.

"Actually, it's supposed to be pink. Apparently some paint managed to cover it in purple!" Priscilla said.

"Well, don't matter. They can't even tell the difference between a seagull and a Woodster." Suzana said.

"Oh... hang on, did you just say "thief mask"?? ... so you're a thief then!!" Priscilla said.

"Yes, I'm a thief. Didn't you notice it already??" Suzana asked sarcastically.

"Don't even think you can try get away! I'll be catching you in one way or another!" Priscilla said.

"Naw, your chances of catching me will be pretty slim now that your band is purple like mine! Who knows, they might as well catch you instead of me if I'm lucky!" Suzana said and starts driving off.

"Hey, come back here!!" Priscilla said and starts giving chase.

Priscilla keeps chasing Suzana across the town, making sure not to lose track of her. After a while though she eventually loses sight of Suzana, but she doesn't let this get the better of her and continues driving after Suzana.

"I know she's around the town somewhere. I'm gonna catch her if it's the last thing I do!" Priscilla said and keeps looking out for the thief on her way. Unfortunately matters seems to be getting worse for her, because the fuel on her bike has just completely drained, and is about to drive into the wall of a building.

"Aah!!" Priscilla said and jumps off the bike before it crashes into the wall.

However, she ends up hurting her right leg after jumping off the bike. She attempts to get herself back up again with little success, forcing her to crawl her way forward.

"Aow... It really hurts! Why is it that I'm now ending up getting hurt here and there on my body!?" Priscilla complained a little as she keep crawling.

She then sees Suzana standing besides her bike near the boat port. After struggling a bit she then manages to stand up on her feet again.

"Alright... this time I'll catch you. Just you wait... in a matter of seconds you're gonna be put behind bars!" Priscilla said and limps her way to where Suzana's standing, but are soon grabbed by the arm by someone. That someone turns out to be the police officer.

"And that's where you're wrong, little girl!" The Police officer said.

"But... but hey, let go of me!" Priscilla said.

"Afraid not. You've been doing enough robberies around this town for a long time now!" the police officer said.

"B-but you don't understand! I'm not a thief! I haven't done anything wrong!" Priscilla said.

"We sure are pretty much aware of what you've been doing, Miss... Now you're coming with us." the police officer said.

"N-no!! Don't you see that girl just behind you?? She's the one responsible for that. She's even got a bag on her bike!" Priscilla said and pointed to Suzana.

"Don't think you can get out of this! You're coming with us, NOW!" the police officer said as he walks Priscilla to the police car. He's not aware that just near him stands Suzana by her bike, and the moment Suzana's about to turn around she bumps into the police officer, making them all fall on the ground.

"OW! Who are you to just bump into me like that??" Suzana complained.

"But hang on, isn't it you??" the police officer said and grabs Suzana's arm.

"Aw no. Of all things in the world I bump into, it just HAS to be the police!" Suzana said to herself.

"Um. Wait a minute now... why is there TWO of them??" the police officer asked himself.

"That's because I happen to be the REAL thief, you stupid buffoon..." Suzana thought to herself.

"See. That's HER! She's the one you should be putting behind bars, not me!" Priscilla said.

"Quiet! I'm trying to sort things out here..." the police officer said while thinking over this new problem. He then decides to run a comparision on both girls to see who's the real thief.

"Alright. I'm gonna compare you two to see who of you could be the real thief. Please stand against this wall here." the police officer told them.

"Well, I'm trying..." Priscilla said as she's limping her way to the wall where Suzana's standing.

The police officer then compares the two by checking their ribbon bands, starting with Suzana. Not being entirely convinced yet, he then checks Priscilla's ribbon band.

"So... has the officer found anything suspicious about me yet?" Priscilla asked.

"I'm on my way..." the officer said and grabs her band, but notices some paint being left on his hand.

"What in the... is this really the thief I'm thinking it to be??" the officer said and pulls out a bucket filled with water and soap. Using a sponge he starts scrubbing Priscilla's ribbon band. The paint then comes off, revealing its actual pink color.

"But how, this can't really be!?" the officer said in shock.

"Afraid so." Priscilla said while shrugging her shoulders, but not without feeling a small pain in her left arm. The officer then tries to scrub Suzana's band. No paint is coming off of it though.

"Ah birdseeds. It seems like we've made a mistake here." the officer said. Just then his assistant comes with a bag full of silver wares, seemingly belonging to the real thief.

"Officer. I just found this bag on the seat of that bike over at the boat port!" the assistant said and shows it to the officer.

"Now that's a real find!" the officer said and opens the bag to find a bunch of silver wares. "Aha, so here we have the stolen goods!" the officer said.

"Yep. I think I'm sure who is responsible for the robbery now." the assistant said.

"And you don't suppose it's the one to the right?" the officer said and points to Priscilla.

"No. From what I could see the broken bike I saw just behind this house didn't have any bag on its seat." the assistant said.

"Just realize it you idiots. It WAS me all along, ok! Just handcuff me already!" Suzana shouted out of impatience.

"Say, do you suppose it could be the girl to the left??" he asked the assistant.

"Yes..." the assistant said.

"Aagh!! You're even more stupid than I thought!! Who's idea was it to even assign you the roles of cops anyway??" Suzana shouted out to them, growing more and more annoyed at the officer's stupidity.

"May I interrupt you guys by telling you that it's Suzana to the left of me who's been responsible for the robbery?" Priscilla told them.

"You think so?" the officer asked her.

"She's more than right, officer. Just take a good look at them both." the assistant told him. The officer does as told, and soon realizes his error.

"Yeah, you're right. The ribbon band of the thief is purple, not pink... which I somehow ended up forgetting." the officer said and handcuffs Suzana.

"Ok little lady. Now that we've caught the real thief, we're clearing you off as a possible suspect for the robbery." the officer told Priscilla.

"Phew. At long last things have finally been sorted out..." Priscilla sighed in relief.

"One question though... what was your reason for driving so fast in the first place?" the officer asked.

"Well... the grips on the steering handle broke, and because of this I couldn't stop the bike." Priscilla said.

"I understand. Is there anything we can do for you?" the officer asked.

"I would be more than glad if you could drive me home. My right leg is hurt, and I can barely even walk." Priscilla said.

"Of course we can. Just tell us where you live and we'll drop you off there." the officer said.

"Alright, thanks! I would also like it if you bring my bike back home. It's just behind the backside of this building." Priscilla said.

"Ok." the officer said and goes to get her bike behind the house.

After driving Priscilla back home to the apartment building where she lives Priscilla waves to police goodbye, with the police doing the same before driving back to the police station with Suzana.

"Hm. Maybe I should give the bike another go??" Priscilla thought to herself, but after reflecting on tonight's events she wisely decides not to do it again.

"Naw, I probably shouldn't even do it again. I'll just push the bike back into the garage and go to bed." Priscilla said and puts Maya's bike back in the garage. After getting into her apartment again she quickly falls asleep in her bed.

The next morning Calimero and friends are about to go to the park with the Wario bros and Maya. Wario and VARIO have just gotten their bikes out, with Maya about to go and get her bike as well.

"Priscilla. I'm bringing my bike out today. Do you want to try practice again today?" Maya asked Priscilla.

"Um... no, I think I rather have my feet on the ground for now." Priscilla refused.

"But Priscilla. Yesterday you were absolutely determined to start driving it. Why don't you want to do it now?" Roshita asked her.

"I... I have my reasons. That's all." Priscilla said.

"But, there must be a underlying reason to it. Priscilla, do you want to try driving the bike or not?" Maya asked her again.

"Alright. Guess I have to tell you all about it." Priscilla said and starts telling them her story. After hearing this Maya is not happy to learn what has happened last night.

"Priscilla! I told you not to try driving my bike without me knowing it! You could've ended up hurting yourself real bad if unlucky!" Maya told her off.

"I'm sorry Maya... I didn't really know what came over me, and... I just couldn't ignore my desire to try and drive it." Priscilla apologized to her and starts to shed some tears.

"Aw, it's ok. At least you seem to be fine despite your right leg's condition." Maya said and forgives her by giving her a hug.

"Alright. Now, do you want to try driving the bike again?" Maya asked her one more time.

"No, just no!! I'm just not trusting myself with that bike anymore! Maybe if somebody else were driving it, only then will I do it." Priscilla refused again.

"Hm... hang on, I think I have the solution!" Maya said and goes into the garage to fix her bike, and also make some adjustments to it.

A little while later Maya is now sitting on her bike, with Priscilla sitting besides her in a passenger seat attached to the right side of the bike.

"Ok Priscilla. Are you ready for the ride?" Maya asked her.

"Will I be safe in this passenger seat?" Priscilla asked.

"You'll be safe. I assure you. I'll also be driving at a speed that feels comfortable to you." Maya said. Priscilla's relieved to hear this.

"Ok, then I suppose I'm more than ready!" Priscilla said. Maya then starts driving with Priscilla in the passenger seat.

"Enjoying the ride?" Maya asked Priscilla.

"I sure am!! This is very exciting Maya! Especially if someone else is driving it for me!" Priscilla said.

Back to the other guys, they watch Maya and Priscilla as they drive off into the center of the town.

"You know. I'm more than happy that Priscilla's now finally getting the chance to drive a bike, even if it isn't she herself who's going to drive it from now on." Roshita said.

"I'm just glad that Priscilla's learned from her mistake last night. Besides, she seems to find it just as fun simply being Maya's passenger!" Calimero said.

"Exactly. All ways to drive a bike are good except the bad ones." Wario-Ware-Man agreed.

"Anyway, I can barely wait to go to the skateboard ramp. Let's all go to the park shall we?" Valeriano said.

"On our way!" Calimero said. Together they all head into the park to have some fun.

The End...