

Wario bros & Maya the Bee (and Calimero) 15/05/2020 14:06 | 15/05/2020 17:01
Series 3, Episode 5(23): Warigo's Coming to Town

In the Wario bros' apartment, on a relatively normal day, Warriio and VARIO are sitting in front of the TV being bored, with Wario-Ware-Man sleeping on the other end of the couch with the newspaper over his face.

"Meh, nothing funny's on TV today." Warriio said in a bored tone.

"I agree. Not even the Condor news are of great attention right now... because Mr. Critichelli is now the host of the news." VARIO said.

"Which is NOO good." Warriio said.

"Hey guys! Anything happening today?" Maya asked the Wario bros as she enters the living room. She doesn't hear a response from any of them.

"Sigh. It's a relatively good day today, and all you guys do are sitting on the sofa doing nothing... maybe I'll just sit down and read on my book." Maya said and sits on one of the armchairs to read.

The mail then bumps down on their doorstep. Maya goes to pick it up. The only kind of mail today is bills, bills... and magazines advertising unwanted stuff.

"Anything of interest today?" Warriio asked.

"Nope." said Maya and drops it all on the living room table and sits on her chair again to read on her book.

"Hrm... Bills... bills... and yet MORE bills, including the usual crappy advertising magazines! She's pretty much right there. Absolutely nothing of interest within the mail." Warriio said, disappointed that there's nothing good within all the mail. While rooting through the bills an envelope drops down on the floor.

"Hunh? What was that??" Warriio said and picks up the envelope. He sees it is addressed to their apartment and opens it to find a letter. The letter reads:

"Hey Wario bros. I decided to pay you guys a visit, and to have a look around the new town you're living in now. It's been a long time since we last seen each other. Hope you guys are doing fine at your new place. Signed, your cousin ~ Warigo"

"What... hey guys, guess who's coming over today!" Warriio said.

"Who??" VARIO asked.

"Our cousin, Warigo!" Warriio said.

"You've gotta be kidding me?!" VARIO said.

"No, I'm not. Read the letter to see for yourself." Warriio said and hands VARIO the letter. After reading the letter VARIO's more than convinced that Warigo is coming.

"Now that's some very exciting news! I haven't seen him since... well, for very long." VARIO said.

"Yaawn... what's all the talk about??" Wario-Ware-Man asked, having just woken up from his nap.

"Warigo is coming to town today!!" Warriio and VARIO exclaimed.

"Oh yeah, Warigo... he's quite a good fellow. It's been a long time since we last saw each other... back in our older times at Dumb-Isle we used to do quite a lot of stuff together, and I kinda miss all that... anyhow, he's probably busy with his own life on that island by now. Who knows when he'll be moving somewhere else..." Wario-Ware-Man said while thinking back on all the adventures they shared with their cousin.

"Hm, maybe we should go out and meet him up?" VARIO asked.

"Good idea. Maybe he needs a guiding hand when he arrives." Warrio said.

"Remember to bring Warigo with you as well if he does turn up, alright?" Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Alright." Warrio and VARIO promises, and starts heading out.

At the bus stop, Warrio and VARIO are now waiting for the bus that Warigo is supposed to be on. The bus arrives, but they're disappointed to find that Warigo's not on the bus.

"Darn..." VARIO said.

"Yep. Maybe he's being late or something?" Warrio said.

Warrio and VARIO then get distracted by a tune played by Emma's Jam band nearby. They head there to listen to the music. It doesn't take long for Emma to notice the two.

"Oh, hi guys!" Emma shouts to Warrio and VARIO.

"Hi." Warrio and VARIO said.

"Enjoying the music, I see?" Emma asked.

"Sure do. Also, we're waiting for our long-time cousin to arrive in town." Warrio said.

"You have a cousin? I didn't know that!" Emma said in surprise.

"It all goes a loong way back, to the time when I, Warrio, and Wario-Ware-Man lived in some other place. I'm not gonna explain everything though, because it would take me quite a long time... and would more than likely take up the whole story." VARIO said.

While Warrio and VARIO is chatting with Emma another bus arrives, and out of it comes Warigo, who is expecting to be met up by his cousins.

"Hm, this place doesn't look quite so bad after all! Where's my cousins by the way? Aren't they supposed to be picking me up here??" Warigo said and looks around. He can't see anyone though.

"Must be taking their time to even get here... In the meantime I'll go and have a look around. Maybe there's some sights worth seeing." Warigo said and starts wandering off. The new surroundings are at most unfamiliar to him. Even so, he seems to be enjoying his time in the town.

A bit later, Warrio and VARIO are now waiting at the bus stop again. Another bus comes again. However, even after all passengers have walked out of the bus, Warigo's still not showing up.

"Nope. No Warigo this time either..." VARIO said.

"We'll stay here and keep a lookout though. At some point Warigo's bound to turn up." Warrio said. At the same time, Warigo is visiting the town's art hall building, looking at the painting being on display.

"Hm. Their view on art here is completely different compared to what's offered in the art hall on Dumb-Isle's central town! Instead of pictures of garlic and Wario-noses, here it is all kinds of art, and much more involved as well!" Warigo said while he keeps gazing at the various paintings.

"Hey there fellow visitor. Having a good time looking at the art in here?" a Dumb-Crow, who is the owner of the art hall building, asked Warigo.

"Yep. The paintings in here are much better-looking than the ones in Dumb-Isle's art hall!" Warigo said.

"Indeed they are. Did you also know that Calimero and his friends has had some painting made here as well?" the owner asked him.

"Calimero... who's that? And who are those friends of his?" Warigo asked.

"Oh, you must be new around here, right? Well, allow me to briefly introduce the Green Team for you. You see, the Green Team basically consists of Calimero himself, Priscilla, Valeriano, Roshita, Susie, and Piero. From what I've come to know they often investigate interesting sites, as well as solving crimes happening in the town." the owner said.

"Ah, now I see. Are there many crimes happening around here?" Warigo asked.

"Quite often, if I say so myself. At one point a trio of thieves barged in here and stole a number of paintings. The Green Team quickly put a stop to them though." the owner said.

"Good to hear that things were sorted out in the end... say, these paintings here look rather marvelous, especially the one with two of the members performing on stage. Who's who in it?" Warigo said.

"Well, the one in a dress is Priscilla, and the other one in a smoking suit is Calimero." the owner said.

"Who painted this picture?" Warigo asked.

"The artist is Adeleine the Painter. She's one of the most recognized and experienced painters around the town, and her artwork is really works of art!" the owner said.

"Are the other pictures of the Green Team members by her as well?" Warigo asked.

"Yes. I'd like to mention though that the last pic with Piero came out a bit wrong due to some accident..." the owner said. Warigo takes a look at the Piero painting and starts to burst out in laughter.

At the bus stop again, Warrio and VARIO are becoming bored of waiting for Warigo's arrival. While they're sitting on the street almost half asleep Calimero and friends are walking past them. Seeing Warrio and VARIO just sitting there at the bus stop, they ask them what the matter is.

"We're waiting for our best friend and cousin, Warigo, to come. We've been sitting here for hours looking out for him, but we still haven't seen him coming out of any bus stopping by." Warrio said.

"Yeah. We're starting to believe that either something's happened to him, or he's forgot it all." VARIO said.

"Hm. If this Warigo fellow has said that he'll be coming, then you guys must've missed him somehow. Maybe we can help you guys track him down?" Calimero said.

"Really?" Warrio asked.

"Absolutely. Me and my friends will help you find your cousin, won't we?" Calimero asked the others.

"We sure will." Priscilla said, with everyone else agreeing.

"Thank garlic! Together maybe we could track him down. This is how Warigo looks like by the way." Warriio said and shows the group a photo of Warigo.

They begin their search at the park, looking at every corner. They can't find him there though.

"Nope. He doesn't seem to be here. Have you guys seen him yet?" Valeriano asked.

"No." said Calimero.

"Me neither." said Priscilla.

They then head to the cafeteria to see if he could be there. Warigo's not there either.

"Hm, Warigo doesn't seem to be here either." Calimero said.

"Can't see anyone sitting at any table here as well. It's all barren." Susie said.

"Maybe we should check out the art hall. That's where most visitors might spend their first day in the town." Valeriano said.

"Good idea." Calimero said.

They head to the art hall to check it out. Inside the building they all look around for Warigo, but even here he doesn't seem to be around.

"Nope, no Warigo here either. I've even checked an extra time just to make sure I haven't missed anything." Valeriano said.

"We should ask the owner there!" Susie suggested.

"Excuse me sir. Have you seen a person Warigo, looking almost exactly like Warriio and VARIO here?" Calimero asked the owner.

"Yes, I've met him in here earlier. He has since gone off though." the owner said.

"So we've missed him already..." Warriio said.

"Hang on, I remember that painting of me and Calimero doing a dance..." Priscilla said and walks towards it to gaze at and adore it.

"Painting? What painting?" Piero asked.

"Aaw, how I wish that this is how me and Calimero could possibly be like in the future... in fact, we really are made for each other, despite our differences." Priscilla started to daydream.

"Yaawn... but wait... that painting over there... it just looks so silly!!" Warriio said and starts to chuckle at the painting of Piero messing up his pose.

"Ha hah, mock it however you want. It wasn't ENTIRELY my fault that the pic turned out the way it did." an slightly annoyed Piero told him off.

"Actually, it WAS your doing because you were trying to boast in front of the painter!" Susie told him.

"Oh yeah... guess she's got a point there." Piero said.

"Guys, we better focus on finding Warigo!" Calimero told the others.

"Oh, right. Guess we were getting a bit carried away there for a moment. Come VARIO, let's keep searching for our cousin!" Warrio said. After everyone gets their minds together again they head back outside again.

Meanwhile, Warigo's now at the park, listening to all the birds sitting on the trees chirping their beautiful morning melodies.

"Hm. I wonder where the Wario bros might be living. I didn't know the address to their apartment, so I just wrote "to the Wario bros" on the letter, hoping it would reach their doorstep." Warigo said.

Just then hears the jam band practicing their instruments in the park, particularly the main leader, Emma. Her playing of her saxophone really tickles his taste for music, despite ever having rarely listened to any music in his entire life.

"That tune sure is quite catchy, miss... um..." Warigo came to a halt, not knowing the young girl's name.

"Thank you mr, and my name's Emma by the way." Emma said and starts playing her saxophone for him.

Later, Calimero and friends, along with Warrio and VARIO, are now at the cafeteria again looking for Warigo.

"Excuse me..." Calimero asked one of the waiters.

"Yes?" the waiter said.

"Have you seen a guy named Warigo attending this place?" Priscilla asked.

"No. I haven't seen him. Sorry." the waiter said and walked off again.

"Let's check the park again." Valeriano said.

"But, haven't we been there before?" VARIO asked.

"Yes, but it couldn't hurt to check the same place again." Valeriano said.

They head to the park again to check a second time. While there they see Emma and her band practising on a piece of music.

"Hi guys!" Emma attracted their attention.

"Hi Emma!" said Priscilla.

"Sorry to interrupt your practice, but have you seen someone named Warigo being around here?" Warrio asked.

"He was here listening to our music earlier. He seemed like a very nice fellow to me though." Emma said.

"Do you know where he's gone to now?" Calimero asked her.

"I guess he went to the central town." Emma said.

"Maybe he's gone off to the museum. Let's go there quick!" Valeriano said. Wasting no time, they head to the museum to see if Warigo could be there.

In the Wario bros' apartment, Wario-Ware-Man are awaiting Warigo's visit to their new home. He looks at the clock on the wall, and starts feeling a bit concerned.

"Hm. The clock on the wall is now at 2, and Wario and VARIO haven't returned... what is taking them so long?!" he kept thinking to himself. He chooses not mind it for the time being, because right now his main task is to clean to Parrot's cage, which is easier said than done.

"Excuse me, but will you move away a bit so Uncle Wario-Ware-Man can clean?" Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Squawk. No way, this is MY cage! Nobody's messing with it!! Go away fatso!!" the parrot said and bites him on the nose.

"Aow! That really hurt... alright, if that's how you're dealing with it..." Wario-Ware-Man said, and when he finally sees his chance, jumps into the cage and starts spraying with his cleaning spray-thingie and attempting to clean the insides of the cage despite the parrot's protests. From her armchair where Maya's still reading on her book, she can only shake her head and sigh as this whole thing is going on.

"Sigh. If it isn't Wario's parrot causing a ruckus, then it's Wario-Ware-Man trying to clean its cage in any way possible... whatever. If I'm honest I also wanna see Warigo again. It's been far too long since we first met..." Maya said to herself and keeps reading her book.

Later inside the museum, Warigo's now walking around looking at the various sculptures, treasures, and other stuff. Upon seeing all the artifacts from thousands of years ago he's reminded of his older times of treasure hunting.

"Sigh. It's been far too long since I last was on any treasure hunting adventures. Maybe I should return to the stuff I used to do earlier?" Warigo started thinking to himself, only to come to a halt and think over his current situation.

"On the other hand, I've since retired from any sort of treasure hunting. After all, I've done all the adventuring I wanted to do throughout my years anyway. In fact, who else has got the remaining treasures of the ancient Atlantic in his house?" Warigo said to himself.

Calimero and friends then arrive in the museum, their main goal being to find Warigo.

"I can't spot him in here." Calimero said.

"Neither us as well!" the others said. VARIO however is quick to spot some fat guy in the background, looking at all the stuff on display.

"Hm, that guy kinda reminds me of Warigo somehow." VARIO said to himself. He tries to get a better look at him, but since the guy is so far away it's hard for him to make out any further details. It also doesn't help him when the guy walks behind a bunch of other persons, only to vanish completely out of sight.

"Oh garlic... gone." VARIO said to himself.

"What are you looking at?" Wario asked him.

"Oh, er... was just looking at the bunch of people in front of me, nothing else." VARIO said.

"Alright, was just wondering." Wario said and resumes looking around for Warigo.

Later again, Warigo's now in his swimming shorts at the swimming hall, having just gotten out of the shower room. He looks to the diving spot where a Dumb-Crow and two Woodsters are taking turns diving.

"Sure looks a lot of fun! Maybe I should try it as well..." Warigo said and decides to head up to the diving spot. Before he does though he sees a young magpie girl swimming in the pool on a bath ring.

While she's in the water a Dumb-Crow is diving underwater. Not seeing where he's swimming, the claws of his feet accidentally causes the magpie's bath ring to burst. The little girl obviously can't swim, and is left waving her arms up and down to try keep herself afloat.

"Uh-oh, time to get distracted Warigo! I'm coming little girl!" Warigo said and quickly dives into the pool. As he's swimming towards the girl he's knocked by a Woodster sitting on a boat-shaped bath ring for a brief moment.

"Oww... watch where you're going! A little girl is about to drown here!!" Warigo shouted at the Woodster.

"Duuuh, sorry about that." said the Woodster and just continues to paddle around in the pool.

"Heelp!!" screamed the little magpie girl as she's about to drown.

"Don't worry. I'm coming!!" Warigo said and keeps on swimming. He rescues the girl in the nick of time and brings her back up. Her parents come and thank Warigo for his act.

"Thank you so much for rescuing our little daughter, handsome gentleman!" her mother said.

"Yeah. We eventually saw what was happening, but we lost sight of her due to all the guys in the pool, and even if we managed to find her we would've been too late to save her. You, my man, saved her just in time. We can't thank you enough for your selfless act. You sir are a gentleman of purest heart." her father said.

"Aw, it was nothing really. I just happened to be at the right place at the right time." Warigo said.

"Why not follow us to the cafeteria after we're done in the bath house. It's the least we can offer you in return as our gratitude for your act." her mother said.

"Sure. I just came here though, so it might take a while for me to finish my time in here." Warigo said.

In another part of the swimming hall, Calimero and friends are tirelessly searching for Warigo. They still can't seem to find him. They're unaware though that Warigo's actually in there, just not where they can easily see him.

"Nope. He's not in here either." Priscilla said.

"I've looked in every corner and spot, including the boys' changing room, yet I didn't see any Warigo in there..." Susie said.

"The boys' changing room???" a slightly suspicious Valeriano asked her.

"Yeah. You said "Look in every corner and room", and that's what I did. I also looked in the girls' changing room just to make extra sure." Susie said.

"Well, at least the latter might not have been much of an issue, I think." Valeriano said.

"Um... I think I did a few slipups in there while looking for Warigo..." Susie said and all of a sudden runs away, leaving the others confused.

"A few slipups?" asked Calimero.

"I think I see what she means!!" said Priscilla and points to a horde of angry girls running towards them.

"Whatever Susie did in there, I'm sure it was only to the detriment of those girls! Let's get out of here quick!!" Piero said and starts running away, with the others following suit, all the while evading the towels of angry girls running at them.

Later it's almost sunset, and Warriio and VARIO, and Calimero & friends are all exhausted from their searching for Warigo.

"Phew... nope, we've looked everywhere now, and yet we're seeing no Warigo." Calimero said.

"I'm already tired from all the running we did back in the bath house..." Piero said.

"Sigh. I think it's dawned on us now... that Warigo's not coming after all... suppose he's forgot about it all and are sitting in his house on Dumb-Isle watching TV or whatever." Warriio said with a disappointed look on his face. VARIO likewise are also disappointed over the fact their cousin isn't coming.

"I was soo hoping to see the guy again, after this very long time..." VARIO said.

"Yeah, me too... suppose we'll just call it a day now and go home, right?" Warriio said.

"Before we head home though... can't I have something to eat first? I'm hungry." VARIO said.

"Hm. You know, I also feel the need to have a little snack. What do you guys say about a visit to the cafeteria?" Calimero asked the other guys. They all think it's a good idea.

At the cafeteria they're now indulging themselves with some sweet refreshments, with Warriio and VARIO tucking in on their own glasses of garlic ice cream.

"It sure has been a long day today." Calimero said.

"Yep. I'm all tired at this point..." Roshita said.

"Sure is a shame we didn't find Warigo, and that he didn't even come to town." Warriio said.

"I agree. Maybe he had other things to do at home, so maybe that's why he couldn't come?" VARIO said.

"Could be possible." Warriio said and keeps eating on his ice cream.

While eating on his ice cream VARIO overhears a group sitting at a table nearby talking to each other. The voice from one of them reminds of Warigo, and indeed that guy is a bit rounder than the others, also wearing a yellow biker outfit. He walks off to the table where they're sitting.

"Um, sorry for interrupting your little chat, but... you look strangely familiar to me, and... you look a lot like our long-time cousin living over at Dumb-Isle" VARIO said, but before he can finish his sentence the person he's talking to turns around to face him.

"But hey, if it isn't VARIO! And yep, it is me, Warigo!" Warigo greeted him.

"Guys, I've found Warigo!!" VARIO shouted to the other guys.

"Where?" Warriio asked.

"He's right where I'm standing, sitting at a table with some other fellows!" VARIO said. They all get off the table to head over to where Warigo's sitting.

"Ah, so that's where you've been!" Warriio said.

"Yes. I've recently made friends with a magpie family and their daughter here. I saved the latter from drowning in the swimming hall earlier, and as thanks her parents took me out on a trip to this cafeteria." Warigo told them.

"Well, that's good and all, but... where the heck have you been? We've been looking for you all day!" Warriio said.

"Well, you see. When I arrived at the bus stop earlier today I couldn't see you and VARIO anywhere. Since I had some time to kill I decided to go and have a look around the town, and boy are things so different here compared to Dumb-Isle." Warigo said.

"At least you seem to have had a good time here, from what I can tell." Calimero told him.

"Yep. It's much better around here. Maybe I should come to this town more often..." Warigo said.

"Well, we're more than relieved to see that you're doing fine, and most importantly; that we've finally found you!" Valeriano said, with everyone else agreeing.

"Um... Warriio, VARIO... what's that all about??" Warigo asked his cousins.

"Er... we and the others here thought that you had either gone missing, or had simply forgot about your visit to the town." Warriio said.

"Oh, I see... well, I'm sorry for just walking off like that. But promise me to stay at the bus stop next time, ok?" Warigo said.

"Alright." Warriio and VARIO said.

"So... where are you guys living?" Warigo asked them.

"Me and VARIO will show you the way. Before that though we'll have to finish our ice creams first." Warriio said.

In the Wario bros' apartment, Wario-Ware-Man are now sleeping on the sofa out of waiting for Warriio and VARIO to return. Just then Warriio and VARIO return again, with Warigo by their side.

"We're back Wario-Ware-Man!" Warriio shouted.

"Ah, at last! ... what took you guys so long?!!" Wario-Ware-Man asked them.

"Um... we kinda lost him while waiting for the bus he was supposed to be on, and as a result it took quite a bit of time to find him." Warriio said.

"Yes. To cut it short, it all went fine for me while touring around the town, and Warriio and VARIO found me by the end of the day." Warigo said.

Just walking out of the kitchen, Maya sees Warigo at the doorstep.

"Oh, hi Warigo!" Maya greeted him.

"Hi to you too, Miss... er, bee." Warigo greeted back.

"He he, thank you..." Maya said and blushes a bit.

"So this is where you guys live now!" Warigo said.

"Yeah. In an small, somewhat cramped apartment. But we've been managing it quite well despite this." Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Yeah. Come to think of it... it's been a rather long time since you and I first met!" Maya told Warigo.

"The same I can say about you. In fact, back at Dumb-Isle I've barely got any more chances to even see you." Warigo said.

"So, what are you doing these days?" Wario-Ware-Man asked him.

"Oh, the usual; doing some gardening outside my house, doing the ironing, tuning in to the TV for any news reports about discoveries of treasures... the latter I've mostly retired from though, but that doesn't stop me from watching others talk about it on TV." Warigo said.

"Yeah. I suppose so." Wario-Ware-Man said.

"So... what are you guys doing these days?" Warigo asked.

"Well. We haven't been doing much treasure hunting either... in fact, we're now more or less investigating interesting places, or catching criminals together with Calimero and his friends, and... that's pretty much it really." Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Yeah, I heard about them on my way here, and they do seem to be quite some nice guys." Warigo said.

"They really are." Wario-Ware-Man said.

"Do come in and make yourself at home. You must be very tired after all that walking around the town." Maya said.

"Yeah. I'm sure we've got a lot to talk about now that it's been so long!" Wario-Ware-Man said.

After Warigo's been welcomed into their apartment the scene cuts to the door of the Wario bros' apartment, which is then closed shut, signifying the end of the story.

The End...